

Automated Form Fill

The Problem

Customers hand us structured facts. Government agencies want those facts on flat PDFs with no fillable fields, in black ink, inside boxes laid out in 2016. Close that gap for one form: NYC Form CC2002B (Mail Request for Marriage Records), attached.

The Task

Given a JSON payload of applicant data, produce a filled, print-ready CC2002B that a city clerk would accept without kicking it back.

Core

- HTTP endpoint or CLI (your call — justify it) taking structured input, returning the filled PDF
- Text lands in the correct cells, legible and inside the box boundaries
- Checkboxes: "form desired" at top, and the sworn-statement group at bottom — mutually exclusive, exactly one, enforced
- The relation and law-enforcement lines have inline blanks, filled only when that option is selected
- Signature line stays empty. It says DO NOT PRINT for a reason.

Validation

- Reject inputs that would produce a rejected filing. At minimum: marriage year before 1950 (wrong agency — that's Municipal Archives), missing or duplicate sworn statement, blank relation when the relation option is chosen.
- Fee calculation. The schedule on page 2 is genuinely ambiguous in at least one place — pick an interpretation, write down why, and make the ambiguity visible in your output rather than silently resolving it.

Correctness

- An automated check that the output is actually right, not just that the code ran — visual regression, position assertion, whatever you can defend. Most candidates skip this. It's what we care most about.

Explicitly out of scope

Auth, persistence, a UI, multi-form generalization. If your design makes the second form easy, say so in the writeup — but ship one form working well.

Deliverables

1. GitHub repo. Any language, any libraries. README with setup that works on a clean machine.
2. Sample outputs. At least three filled PDFs from three different input scenarios, committed.
3. Presentation, 20-30 min. Your approach, what didn't work, where the form fought you, what you'd do with two more weeks. Slides optional; a repo walkthrough is fine.

Timebox

Roughly 6-8 hours. A narrow thing done carefully beats a broad thing half-done. If you run out of time, write down what you'd have done next — that's part of the evaluation, not an apology.

What We're Evaluating

- Does the output actually pass? Open the PDF, does it look filed-ready?
- How you handled the parts of the spec that are underspecified (there are several, deliberately)
- Whether your correctness story is real or ceremonial
- Clarity of the writeup and the talk

Notes

The source PDF has no AcroForm fields. Coordinate overlay, OCR-assisted positioning, and full re-typesetting are all legitimate, with different tradeoffs — we care which you pick and why. Hardcoding a hundred coordinates is a fine answer if you can explain when it breaks.

Questions welcome at any point; asking good ones counts in your favor.
